SWEET AND SOUR The landmark decision of the Supreme Court ordering the distribution of land is sweet victory for Hacienda Luisita workers. For the Cojuangcos, it spells the end of the family's control of the vast sugarcane plantation and sugar milling business in Tarlac province. 80-year-old 'lola' gives thanks for piece of land

IN HER LIFETIME Virginia "Lola Inpang" Paligutan, 80, traveled to Manila from Tarlac to express her gratitude to the Supreme Court for ordering the distribution of land in Hacienda Luisita to Tarlac farmworkers.

By Leila B. Salaverria in Manila and Tonette Orejas in Concepcion, Tarlac

WHEN NEWS broke that the Supreme Court had decided to break up Hacienda Luisita and distribute the sprawling sugar plantation to farmers, 80-year-old Virginia Paligutan wept.

She shed tears of joy because hacienda workers, who had been caught in the vortex of a decades-long period of peasant unrest over a feudal land ownership system, would finally get a piece of the vast estate straddling Tarlac City and the towns of Concepcion and La Paz.

Virginia recalled that one of her sons, Valentino, who was retrenched from the hacienda after it encountered worker protests over a stock distribution arrangement in lieu of land distribution under the 1988 Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP), had gone to the hills and joined the New People's Army.

Valentino, then 52, died of a gunshot wound in an encounter with government troops in 2005.

"My child, we have won," she remembered saying on hearing the Supreme Court ruling.

"We have worked so hard for this," Virginia told the Inquirer outside the Supreme Court building, where she had joined

Arroyo doctors at odds with her lawyers

By DJ Yap

DOCTORS attending to former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo reportedly refused at one point to sign a medical certificate prepared by her lawyers.

Arroyo's physicians at St. Luke's Medical Center in Taguig City were torn between adhering to the doctor-patient privilege and disclosing the actual state of her health, a high government official said. But he did not name names.

One of the doctors even suggested that Arroyo, now a representative of Pampanga, be moved to another hospital, said the official who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of the case.

"GMA is already fine. But the doctors are facing a dilemma on whether they can release this in-

LUISITA STATEMENT

'The hacienda is no more'

A SPOKESPERSON said Hacienda Luisita Inc. (HLI) would respect the Supreme Court decision calling for the distribution to workers of the estate owned by the family of President Aquino that the Supreme [illegible] yesterday owed San Miguel Corp. (SMC) P2 billion.

An SMC source said the farmworker-beneficiaries could be saddled with the debt from the nation's highly diversified conglomerate of which Mr. Aquino's uncle, Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco, is chair. Cojuangco was a major contributor to the President's election campaign last year.

"I'm not saying that they (hacienda owners) are happy. But they respect it. We shall abide it," said Tony Ligon, HLI spokesperson.

By Kristine L. Alave and Marice Ramos

AGRARIAN Reform Secretary Virgilio delos Reyes yesterday said he was prepared to distribute Hacienda Luisita to its workers once the Supreme Court decision ordering this becomes final.

Delos Reyes said he expected that the court ruling, directing that the 5,000-hectare estate owned by the family of President Aquino, could still be appealed by Hacienda Luisita Inc. (HLI).

Church revises Roman Missal

By Jerome Aning

WHILE Roman Catholics in the United States will be using a revised missal at the start of the Christmas season on Sunday, Catholics in the Philippines will have to wait another year to do so.

Caloocan Bishop Deogracias Iñiguez said the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP) already had an English version of the Roman Missal. But it needs to be translated into various native languages in the Philippines, he said.

"We already have an English translation but we're still waiting for it to be translated to the vernacular. We'll be using the revised missal starting the First

OFWs come home for high paying jobs

WHILE many continue to seek greener pastures abroad, some overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) are going against the tide to take up job offers at home.

One such OFW is Malaysia-based computer whiz Adam Teodoro who packed his bags and flew home to the Philippines this year.

Forced to leave his family and friends in 2008 in search of a decent job overseas, the 35-year-old bachelor is back for good because his skills are suddenly in big demand amid a business process outsourcing boom.

"Nothing compares to being back in the Philippines," said Teodoro, who was part of a

Catholic Church revises Roman Missal

POPE BENEDICT XVI

Sunday of Advent 2012," [illegible] told the [illegible] over the phone.

The CBCP Episcopal Commission on the Liturgy, headed by Zamboanga Archbishop Romulo Valles, is leading the translation of the missal into Filipino, Cebuano, Hiligaynon, Bicolano, Waray and other major languages of the Philippines in consultation with various dioceses.

"The 40-year-old liturgy with its colloquial English phrasings will be replaced by a revised Roman Missal that's 'word-for-word' more literally tied to the original Latin Mass," USA Today reported.

The Roman Missal, also called Order of the Mass, is the liturgical book that contains the texts and rubrics for the celebration of the Mass in the Roman Rite of the Catholic Church.

Pope John Paul II authorized the revision of the missal way back in 2001 to reflect the Latin original. Pope Benedict XVI approved the revisions last year.

Changes

An example of the changes is the response "Et cum spiritu tuo" (literally, "And with your spirit"), which is rendered "And also with you" in the current missal.

There were also changes made in the Eucharistic prayer, in which the text "...cup of my blood" was changed to "...chalice of my blood," and "it will be shed for you and for all men," which was changed to "which will be poured out for you and for many."

Other changes, according to USA Today and the Washington Post, include the following:

- Where the Nicene Creed once spoke of Jesus as "one in Being with the Father," now Jesus is "consubstantial with the Father."
- The Gloria hymn's familiar opening "Glory to God in the highest, and peace to his people on Earth," is narrowed to offer peace only for those who have accepted Jesus as Messiah, considered by the Church as "people of good will."
- The line "Lord, I am not worthy to receive you, but only say the word and I shall be healed," becomes "Lord, I am not worthy that you should enter under my roof, but only say the word and my soul shall be healed."

The English version was completed by the International Commission for English in the Liturgy (ICEL) last year and adopted by English-speaking countries such as the United States. The Philippines is a member of the ICEL, with Valles as representative.

Approved in January

In its plenary assembly in January early this year, the CBCP approved the adoption of the new English translation.

"Some parts of familiar responses and prayers have been amended to reflect the true meaning in the original Latin text, the language of the Roman liturgy," the CBCP said.

The CBCP earlier ordered the liturgy commission to prepare a catechetical primer on the new missal to explain the changes to the clergy and laity. The primer would compare the 1970 and 1973 missals in both English and the vernacular.

Fr. [illegible], executive secretary of the commission, said changes always would offer some difficulties, hence the need for liturgical catechesis for everybody, including the bishops and priests.

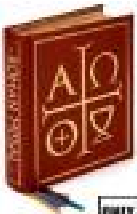

Critics

The new missal has its critics in the United States and Ireland.

Hundreds of Irish priests have called on their bishops to delay the use of the missal, according to USA Today. They also challenged the scholarship behind the changes.

A priest in Seattle, Michael Ryan, launched a campaign on the Web urging the Vatican to first test it on a pilot group of parishes.

But the US bishops praised the new missal. "God merits elegant language, not 'Hey, God, it's me,'" Msgr. Eugene Morris, director of Sacred Liturgy for the Pontifical College Josephinum in Columbus, Ohio, was quoted as saying by USA Today.

THE CATHOLIC Church needs to print a revised edition of the Roman Missal. In the Philippines, the revised missal will be used starting on the first Sunday of Advent next year.

CELEBRATING 25 Days of Christmas 25 Years of PAGCOR

Helping the Filipino has been a way of life for the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation (PAGCOR) and its employees.

Over the years, PAGCOR has always drawn inspiration from its primary mandate of helping the government raise the much-needed revenues to help push this country forward and improve the lives of thousands of our countrymen.

PAGCOR is one with President Benigno Simeon Aquino III in his campaign to uplift the lives of the Filipinos through the "Matuwid na Daan" principle under his administration. This is the reason why the agency has been conducting relevant Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) projects that help make a difference in the lives of our countrymen.

On its Silver Anniversary, the state-owned gaming agency rolls out its biggest CSR gift-giving project ever through its Pamaskong Handog 2011: 25 Days of Christmas, 25 years of PAGCOR beginning today.

tion, he welcomed Tony like a long lost brother. Ninoy gave him exclusive interviews. A former journalist, the senator typed the answers in Tony's presence. He gifted Tony with four poems, signed by him, and which he said he composed just for Lopez.

And before Ninoy flew to Manila via Taipei on August 20 and 21, 1983, he asked Asiaweek to embed a reporter or photographer in his flights. Tony was deemed too high profile to be the reporter. But Asiaweek boarded a photographer from Hongkong. His photograph became the picture in the 300-page [illegible].

When Ninoy was assassinated, Tony Lopez's Asiaweek story was a bestseller. The issue sold 18,000 copies in one day. The Second issue was also a bestseller. The issue sold 13,000 copies in one day.

Lopez also [illegible] a full-time [illegible] coverage of the Agrava Commission's daily hearings on Ninoy's assassination. He was the only publication [illegible] a blow-by-blow account of the Agrava trial.

When Cory launched her candidacy for president, Asiaweek backed her to the hilt although Marcos was very fair to Lopez and granted him an interview each time he asked for one (including an exclusive, three days after Ninoy's assassination).

Later, Asiaweek was sold to Time Warner which quickly killed the magazine to stop a rival from overtaking them in Asia. Lopez founded BizNewsAsia a year after leaving Asiaweek.

She takes us holiday shopping for clothes you can wear from cocktails to gala balls

AS EARLY as September, luxury retailer Rustan's has been busy stocking the store with gorgeous numbers, as well as introducing distinctive merchandise from luxury brands like Lily Pulitzer, Rachel by Rachel Roy, Hose Ergoda, Halston and Emilio Pucci.

They've also been decking the posh retail space with Christmas ornaments, to add to the festive cheer.

That's why if we were to wear anything with elegant ball-worthy numbers,

LADY GAGA'S "solar system" dress with orbit-like rings over a sheer hoop skirt, centerpiece of the Giorgio Armani Red Carpet Retrospective Exhibit in New York City last year, is conspicuously missing in the show ongoing in Hong Kong.

While it's surely not the legendary Italian designer's most classical design, it was one of his collaborative pieces with the flamboyant pop star, and an absolute scene-stealer at the 2010 Grammys. If not his typical, classically elegant red-carpet dress, it's one of the most memorable from Armani in recent memory.

Fourteen gowns at Armani Chater House in central Hong Kong will not be disappointed, however, as they're afforded a rare chance to see up close red-carpet Armani Privé dresses worn by Hollywood stars like Anne

From casual to premium lines, same price points—and thus a fashion hit

By Alex Y. Vergara

IN AN INCREASINGLY crowded luxury goods market, German brand Hugo Boss, with five lines to offer clients, continues to defy the current global economic slump by posting impressive growth the world over. The numbers are particularly impressive in Asia, where it plans to introduce bespoke men's suits next year.

Hong Kong-based Gerrit Rutzel, president and CEO of Hugo Boss Asia-Pacific, recently visited Manila to share the news. Together with executives from Stores Specialists Inc., exclusive representative of Hugo Boss in the Philippines, he also explored the possibility of opening a fourth Hugo Boss store in the country, most likely in Cebu.

Hugo Boss' foray in the south would depend not on the size of a market, said Rutzel, because the brand is already popular among many discerning Cebuanos, but on the development of new, upscale malls in Metro Cebu.

"Hugo Boss is present in 124 countries," said the German-born Rutzel, 37. "In China alone, we're present in more than 50 cities. We're one of the biggest fashion houses in the world. For the first time in the company's history we would hit the 2-billion euro mark this year."

Even in Europe where most economies are trying to keep their heads above water, Hugo Boss, with headquarters in Metzingen, Germany, posted a respectable 16-percent growth in the first six months of 2011.

Five lines

Of the brand's five lines—Black, Orange, Green, Hugo and Boss Selection—only Boss Black is so far available in the Philippines. Each line, which includes clothes, bags, eyewear, perfume and various accessories, offers items for both men and women.

The brand also did away with the common practice of most fashion houses to appoint an overall creative director. Instead, each line has its own creative director responsible for determining the overall look, and the items that would come out of the runway and eventually end up in stores.

"The main man for Boss Black is Kerry Lobo," said Rutzel, who joined the company 18 years ago. "He's German and has been on top of Boss Black for quite a number of years now."

Each line also has its own creative team, from stylists to photographers, responsible for producing specific stories and looks for all said points. Although these creatives may compare notes, said Rutzel, they're not obliged to follow or draw inspirations from a specific theme.

Autonomy

That autonomy even extends to each special or store openings. For a forthcoming Boss Black store opening in Hong Kong, for instance, people behind it have lined up a jazz player to provide the music.

"It's in keeping with the line's classic and elegant image," said Rutzel. "A couple of weeks ago, we celebrated the opening of a Boss Orange store also in Hong Kong. Since it appeals to a younger market, we had a rock band playing there."

In the Philippines, Hugo Boss' three stores are located at Greenbelt 4, Shangri-La Plaza Mall and a newly opened one at Resorts World.

"Boss Black, which can be described as elegant and modern classics, is our core line," said Rutzel. "If I'm not mistaken, it comprises 60 percent of the brand."

If Black's core item is the suit, Orange, which appeals more to younger customers, is all about casual dressing consisting mostly of jeans and T-shirts.

Green is packaged as sportswear, particularly for golfers, but it's good enough to be worn outside the golf course, Rutzel assured.

For the more fashion-forward customer, the brand offers an "edgy" line simply dubbed as Hugo. As far as the line's suits go, said Rutzel, the cut is "a bit slimmer and more edgy."

Unlike Tom Ford, the brand, Hugo Boss has yet to enter bespoke or made-to-measure suits. The closest it can come up with is Boss Selection, a decidedly high-end line that uses more expensive fabrics and components.

"Boss Selection doesn't offer MTO (made to order) yet," said Rutzel. "But we're planning to introduce MTO to the Asian mar-

Causes of and solutions to darkened lips

MILA Kunis

Smoking, excessive consumption of caffeine, exposure to sunlight and dehydration contribute to the darkening of your lips. Bring back the healthy color by using a lip balm with SPF

Hi, Kelly! I'm 24 and I've been using lip products for over a decade now: lipsticks, lip gloss, lip tints, lip balms, lip lacquers, even petroleum jelly. Over the years, I've noticed a gradual darkening of the color of my lips. Why does this happen and how can I reverse this?—Rica

TRICKS OF THE TRADE

Kelly Misa

As nice as it is to blame lip products for the gradual darkening of your lips, you should know that there are also other reasons why this may happen. Smoking, excessive consumption of caffeine, exposure to sunlight and dehydration can all contribute to the darkening of your lips. And while it's true that some lip products may cause this, it is most likely due to using products from disreputable companies or products that have already expired (if you've been using them for more than two years, it's time to chuck them out).

Unless you're allergic to your lip products, it is highly unlikely that your favorite lipstick, lip gloss or lip tint caused the change in your lip color. You see, makeup goes through a stringent process of formulation and manufacturing, so that they don't cause problems or other health issues. But to be on the safe side, it may be better to switch to lip products made with natural ingredients, in very sheer or transparent shades. Or stop using lip products altogether (at least for a few weeks) and see if there is any improvement.

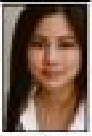

Getting back your natural lip color may take some time, but the condition of your darkened lips is reversible. Below are a list of preventive measures so as to lighten your lips and restore their natural tone.

- Stop smoking. Apart from the long list of health problems linked with smoking, getting noticeably darker lips, teeth and gums should be among the many reasons to quit it (its association with heart disease and cancer should be enough reason). It also has known damaging effects on the skin, like an ashy complexion, dry skin and wrinkles formed around the eyes and mouth. So if you've been thinking of quitting, there's no better time than today.
- Limit your intake of tea and coffee. Just how caffeine can stain teeth, it can also make lips darker, depending of course, on how much you consume. Large doses of caffeine taken daily may get you through the day, but in time can give your lips a darker pigment. Counter this effect by drinking water with your coffee or tea, or try cutting back a cup or two daily.
- Use a lip balm with SPF. We spend so much time protecting our skin from the sun's harmful UV rays we completely forget to apply SPF on our lips. Our puckers can also burn (in fact, they are very sensitive to UV rays), especially with constant sun exposure. Using a lip balm with a minimum SPF of 15 will do the trick, and will keep your lips smooth and chap-free.
- Drink more water. Not drinking enough water can cause our bodies to be dehydrated, and this manifests in rough, chapped, and to some degree, darker lips. We obviously need water to survive, but surprisingly, we aren't drinking enough. The recommended two to three liters of water should be taken throughout the day to keep us hydrated and healthy, and our lips moisturized.
- Exfoliate your lips. Gently removing dead skin on our lips is a must if you want it to go back to its original color. You can easily do this by using a wet baby toothbrush to slough away dry skin and apply petroleum jelly on your lips after. Or make a yummy lip scrub by mixing sugar and honey and applying it on your lips. Honey is a natural antioxidant that helps protect lips from damage and sugar will remove rough lip skin.

A RECENT brush with fate and the theme "Coming of Age" had led me to contemplate the journeys of those about to end a chapter of their lives, and where they are headed. College stands as the bridge between the road that has been and the bigger world yet to come—the final call that insists you grow up and take life more seriously.

Kat Cruz, Look Magazine fashion editor

"I dress for the holidays with glitter, high heels, and red lip stick."

Holiday fashion tip: "When in doubt, ... and always have with you a statement jacket wherever, whenever. It wraps you as a pretty little package no matter what."

Pamela Picazo-Garcia, L'Oreal corporate communications manager

"Christmas is my favorite holiday as it's a very exciting and festive time of the year and you really feel the spirit of family and friends during this celebration. Since I look forward to the holidays, I always look for a new dress to wear for Christmas."

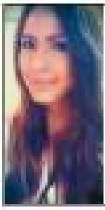

Holiday fashion tip: "To avoid stress, I pick out my dress in advance. For example, I already bought a dress last October ... something dressy and stylish, yet comfortable, because usually there are lunches followed by dinners and you're out the whole day and rarely get the chance to go back home and change. An outfit that can last you the whole day would do the trick, or something you could accessorize to go from day to night."

Eunice Lucero, Preview Magazine associate editor

"I make it a point to dress up more during the holidays, more parties means more excuses to go crazy with accessories. Sparkle, shimmer, lace and ... my go-tos."

Holiday fashion tip: "To keep things stress-free, simplify your outfit and splurge on accessories. Also, don't be afraid to get your money's worth out of that LBD, and invest in very ... comfy heels that can take you from an office Christmas party to dancing with the girls."

Angela Alarcon, Mega Magazine fashion editor

"I like to take advantage of the festive season by dressing in more sophisticated fabrics such as tweed, wool, blends, and other knits. And I love layering during the cooler season, which calls for the need to wear my leather jacket."

Holiday fashion tip: "I think women should keep in mind that they only have the holidays to dress up as sparkle and festive as they want, so they should have fun, while keeping ... under layers."

Drama is always in season for the Cordero woman

Holiday dressing is all about richness and glamour, says the veteran fashion designer

By [illegible]

THE TYPICAL Auggie Cordero woman is almost always in any party's best-dressed list, so it's almost de rigueur for the veteran fashion designer to add a bit of drama to anything he creates.

For the holidays, and especially with the lead-up to the red-carpet season in Hollywood early next year, Cordero is all about richness and glamour: ball skirts, [illegible] beads, and lush materials like lace, organdy, organza, layered chiffon, and even [illegible].

[illegible] years running, violet is still proving to be a hot color, according to Cordero, as well as white and champagne. The trend [illegible] on black, he adds, but "red is making a comeback."

Orange was being pushed in the trends, but Filipino women of a certain age seem not to have warmed up to it, he notes. "Color blocking didn't pick up, either. Women over 40 can't seem to picture wearing an orange top with fuchsia pants or skirt," he says.

He also wanted to introduce big prints to his clients. But [illegible] affluent women want to hold on tight to their pocketbooks. If they can't be photographed twice in it, it's too trendy and expensive. "They would rather buy off the rack," he says.

[illegible] years of dealing with a variety of clients, from the [illegible] to the demanding, has taught Cordero to make compromises. Lace in all colors is one of the season's big trends, but certain women are averse to it, so he only uses it as embellishment. Older women also tend to dislike ruffles or tulle fabric, so he doesn't push it. Oddly, he adds, they don't seem like black-and-white clothes.

"A lot of them like structured dresses, with a scoop back and a bodice that's a little fitted," he says. "I give them that."

[illegible] to a client's demands, however, has its limits, even to the genial Cordero. Once, a longtime client asked him to incorporate [illegible] a dress as in Hacienda [illegible]. Cordero was [illegible] and quickly put his foot down.

A pilgrimage of faith and self-discovery

Ateneo students journey to Madrid and learn the way of the 'Magis'

By Margaret Ann F. Nitura
Student contributor
Ateneo de Manila University

I'M BOTH proud and grateful I was part of The World Youth Day (WYD) in Madrid. It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience, something I can never ever forget, and joining the Magis made it more meaningful.

THE AUTHOR: Magis Philippines delegation

Delegates usually come days before the WYD celebration to join the Days in the Dioceses, a program organized by different dioceses to prepare the pilgrims for the special day. I didn't join the program, but instead joined Magis, together with 30 other students from the Ateneo de Manila.

Magis is a special program created by the Society of Jesus, along with other organizations, that brings together communities from all over the world that practice Ignatian Spirituality (following the example of St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Jesuits). It was a week's worth of activities in the days leading up to the WYD.

The highlight of these activities are the "Experiments." Magis participants are separated into groups of 25, of various nationalities, and sent out on different experiences of faith and culture, social service, arts, ecology, pilgrimage.

They were sent to Spain, Portugal, France and even Africa. I was part of the pilgrimage group, arguably the most intense "experiment" of them all.

Magis meet

Initial meeting of Magis 2011 participants took place in Madrid, the actual hometown of St. Ignatius, in Loyola. It was such a beautiful place. The view of the Loyola castle and the Basilica of St. Ignatius, with its surrounding gardens and picturesque mountains as backdrop, left us in awe.

For three days, we stayed in this pavilion, together with 2,500 other participants from all over the world. We had community masses, prayer sessions and catechesis. There were also concerts during the evening. Magis fair with various games and activities. We were able to explore the castle and the rest of the town.

After three days, we went to our respective "experiment" grouping. The pilgrimage group was assigned to the Northern part of Spain, in Asturias.

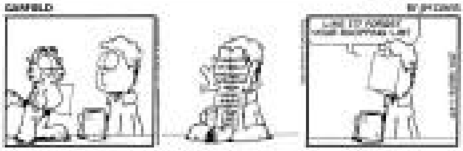

The pilgrimage lasted for five days, and we had to haul our heavy hiking backpacks.
